E. Germany Warns Officials To Shun Visits by Westerners

In a decree issued earlier this month, leading Communist party members and other East Germans with official functions are barred from receiving visits by their West German relatives.

Official sources in West Berlin said the number of those affected by the ban could be as high as two million.

between the two Germanys.

The indoctrination drive was officially opened in a 15-point declaration by the party's Central Committee, calling for "closest vigilance" and opposition to Western influence

Deeply Worried

Western observers said the Communist leaders appeared to be "deeply worried" over the appeal West Germany's Social Demboratic policies under Chancellor Willy Brandt was exercising on East Germans.

"Social Democracy is nothing more than another evil form of imperialism," the party statement

For years, the East German government has sought to isolate the country from the West.

However, the series of East-West agreements concluded in the last few months has undermined this policy. The Berlin pact, the East-West German traffic agreement and the recent accord aimed at normalizing relations between the two Germanys all envisage an increasing number of contacts, visits and mutual cooperation at various levels.

About six million West Germans and West Berliners have made trips to East Germany for family reunions so far this year. Under the "basic treaty" normalizing German relations, about six million other West Germans from the border regions will be able

The Fast Germans expect to gain international recognition through the agreements, but at least some of those in the party hierarchy fear the price to be paid is a threat to ideological stability. The measure barring certain officials from Western contacts was imposed after voluntary restrictions proved insufficient. Party leaders in plants and offices originally had been required to pledge that they would refrain from taking trips to the West or from seeing their Western relatives. But officials soon found that at least the latter pledge could easily be broken, particularly in big cities.

Under the new order, officials at ministerial levels, party workers, union officials, members of the armed forces and police units are forbidden to have Western visitors at their homes and must seek permission to see them at other places. A 73-year-old West Berlin woman who visited her sister in East Germany for the first time in 15 years said her nephew, a lieutenant colonel, had been re-fi sed permission to come to his mother's house and see the aunt. In other cases, soldiers and officials have told their relatives they have been reprimanded by their superiors because of Western family contacts. Party's Stand

The party declaration on ide-ology declared: "In view of the advancing policy of peaceful co-existence between countries of different social order and the simultaneous aggrevation in ideological confrontation, 🛪 view of the masses of meetings between people of contrasting beliefs and ways of life, the closest vigilance and greatest party ac-

A Comfortable Seat Margin Is Won by Brandt in Election

(Continued from Page 1) ment benches caused Mr. Brandt to lose his majority. As a result. the chancellor was forced to gamble on forcing the dissolution of the Bundestag and seeking new elections almost a year ahead of their normally scheduled time.

The move was dangerous because all pre-election signs indicated that the Christian Democtats were still West Germany's majority party. In addition, there were fears that the Free Deinocrats, who had been slipping in recent elections, might fall below the 5 percent vote necessary to be represented in the Bundestag. Finally, there was Mr. Brandt's vulnerability on domestic economic issues. West Germany's rate of inflation is currently running at more than 6 percent—the highest figure in the postwar period-and the Christian Democrats tried to make this the paramount issue of the carpaign.

That strategy appeared sound because Germans still retain vivid memories of the 1920s and late 1940s when runaway inflation wiped cut the life savings of millions.

Every previous postwar election here has turned largely on economic issues. And it is the Christian Democrats, who controlled the government for two decades prior to 1969, that the public generally identifies with price and monetary stability. But, for the first time, foreign policy clearly outpaced the economy as an issue, and the voters turned heavily to Mr. Brandt-

the man who last year brought this country its first Nobel Peace Price since the war. Before tonight, some observers. expecting a narrow victory marcin, had predicted further trouble in a new coalltion with the fiscally conservative Free Democrats opposed to wide-scale reform. Reassessment Needed

However this outlook now will have to be reassessed. The pace of domestic reform in Mr. Brandt's second term will still be far slower than many of his more leftist supporters would like, but the immediate impression tonight was that he will have more latitude and support for his programs than anyone had expected. As for the Christian Democrais, almost all observers bere agree that Mr. Barzel. 48. is through as opposition leader and that a new struggle can be expected for leadership of the movement There was immediate speculation tonight that Mr. Strauss, whose party maintained its traditional strength in Bavaria, will now be able to dominate the Christian Democratic Union as well.

clection confirmed the demise of the extreme right-wing National Democratic party. It scored only 0.4 percent of the This compared with 4.3 percent in 1969-a figure which critics said was dangerously near the 5 percent that any party needs to be represented in the Bundestag.

In the mid-1960s, it was voted into seven of the 11 West German state legislatures. Its strldent nationalism and ultraconservative program caused concern both in West Germany and abroad that a neo-Nazi revival was on the way.

Since then, the NPD-weakened by internal dissent-has gradually disappeared from the political scene, losing all its state seats, In compaigning for the federal elections, the party fielded candidates in 236 out of the 248 federal voling districts.

Even the Free Democrats, generally regarded here as a dying won an unexpectedly strong new lease on life largely because their leader. Walter Scheel, serves as foreign minister in the Brandt government and is closely identified with the Eastera policy.

The Social Democrats, with more than 46 percent, should have 232 deputies in the new Bundestag. This is a substantial jump from 1969 when they won 42.7 percent of the popular vote and gained 324 Bundestag seats. The Free Democrats, with a vote today of around 8 percent, should have 40 parliamentary seats. In 1969, they barely squeaked into the Bundestag, with 5.8 percent and then held only 30 seats.

If these figures hold up, the government coalition will have deputies when the new Bundestag meets, probably on Dec. 14. That will give them a margin far in excess of the 249vote absolute majority necessary to control the House and re-elect Mr. Brandt as chancellor.

Schroeder Loses

In local results, Gerhard Schroeder, a former foreign minister tagged for the post again if the Christian Democrats had won the election, suffered defeat in Dusseldorf at the bands of Uwe Holtz, 28, a Social Democrat. However, Mr. Schroeder will enter parliament on the Christian Democratic list. In the Dortmund constituency, formerly represented by Finance and Economics Minister Karl Schiller, little-known Werner Zeitler won for the Social Democrats with only 0,8 percent less than Mr. Schiller got in 1969. Mr. Zeitler said this ended the legend that Mr. Schiller was a major vote-getting "locomotive" in the 1969 elections, Mr. Schiller did not run for parliament this

If Mr. Barzel had won the chancellorship, most observers thought he would have been onable and unwilling to reverse what Mr. Brandt has done. But his election would have caused serious disappointment and sus-plcion in Eastern Europe and would probably bave resulted in an initial sharp braking of the rush to end the cold war.

Under the slogan 'Willy Brandt must remain chancellor," the Social Democrats had been running all out on the coattails of the chancellor's personal popularity and his record in foreign policy. Lnbeck, West Berlin

That was the theme sounded by Mr. Brandt on the final day of the campaign yesterday. began with a sentimental stop at the northern port city of Lubeck, where he was born poor and il-legitimate 58 years ago. Then Mr. Brandt flew to West

Berlin, where he first gained worldwide fame during 10 turbulent cold war years as mayor. In his final campaign speech, he reminded the people of the divided city that only a decade ago they lived with the day-to-day possibility of world war breaking out in their streets. "We have made peace in Germany and Europe more secure," he said. "Berlin, the symbol of cold war many years, is now the hopeful sign for a durable peace in Europe." Mr. Brandt concluded: "We have the great chance now bar war from Europe forever and secure peace for generations. We should not stop halfway."

Mr. Barzel and other Christian Democratic candidates spent yesterday emphasizing bread-andbutter domestic issues. Their strategy was summed up in the "We will build progress slogan: from stability."

Mounting Inflation This was a reference to West

Germany's mounting inflation. The Free Democrats had pressed their bid to stay alive with a two-pronged campaign strategy. They had emphasized Mr. Scheel's role as Mr. Brandt's partner in Ostpoiltik, and they contended that their presence in the Eundestag is a moderating factor that keeps the Social Democrats from backsliding into Marxism and the Christian Democrats from reaction and clericalism.

Canada Backs U.S. Bid to Cut Its UN Dues

By Robert Alden UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., NOV.

19 (NYT).—Canada yesterday gave strong support to a U.S. effort to reduce Washington's contribution to the UN budget. But it was apparent that the U.S. initiative faced an battle. In the session of the General

Assembly's Finance Committee, Brazil and Czechoslovakia spoke against the U.S. proposals to reduce its contribution from 31.5 percent to 25 percent. This year's budget is $203 million. ssments are based on a country's ability to pay. The United States is proposing that a new ceiling of 25 percent be put on the contribution of any single state. The existing ceiling—a theoretical one, not yet achieved-now stands at 30 percent.

Speaking for Canada in the Pinance Committee, Saul F. Rae said, "In the long run the proposed ceiling is both realistic and desirable.

The U.S. position is that the UN has more than doubled its membership since the organiza-tion's inception in 1945 and that the UN would be on a sounder footing if its assessments were more evenly proportioned and if it was not overly dependent on the contribution of a single coun-

He said the Peronist movement had begun to bridge a generation gap and would "hand over to the young our banners, for them to carry to triumph."

About 2,000 Peronists camped around the mansion overnight, after thousands of other demonstrators surged away to stage a procession in downtown Buenos

Police patrols, armored cars and scores of steel-helmeted men with machine guns quickly sealed off the central zone to prevent the Peronists from reaching the Plaza de Mayo-site of the Casa Rosada, the Pink House, or presidential palace,

The military, which ousted Mr. Peron after he had ruled largely with labor and peasant support for nine years, reportedly is still against him. Most members of the officer corps would never allow him to regain the presidency, according to observers. And, because he did not return by the deadline imposed by the present military regime for pres-idential candidates—this past August being established as the deadline-he is not recognized officially as having any stature in elections scheduled for next March by Gen, Alejandro Lanusse, the current president. The President said he rejected the measures on grounds they would "breach the budget" by $704 million in this fiscal year and $1.9 billion in the next one.

Since it takes a two-thirds majority in both the Senate and the House to override a presi-dential veto, it is uncertain whether override efforts would socceed. In the Sanate, bowever, the Democrats increased their margin by two seats to 57-43.

However, the vetoed bills were popular in Congress and override advocates note what happened

when the President vetoed another popular bill, the landmark program to eliminate pollution from the nation's waterways by 1985

By margins of 52 to 12 in the Senate and 247 to 23 in the House, Congress overrode the veto and put the bill on the lawbooks over the President's objections that it was too expensive Almost simultaneously, it is noted, the Senate killed by a vote of 39 to 17 the President's proposal to grant him unprecedented power to cot any federal program to any level he wished to keep federal spending under $250 billion in this fiscal year. Furthermore, backers of Sen.

Humphrey's proposal are optimistic they will get the support of congressional Republicans who might feel less inclined to back the President next year for two major reasons. First, Mr. Nixon cannot succeed himself and some Republicans will feel less obligated to support him in his second term. And secondly, some congressional Republicans are angry with tha President because they feel he ignored GOP candidates in concentrating on his own race and as a consequence let several Republicans go down to defeat where his help might have made an all-time non-presidential mark Other senatorial and gubernatorial campaigns in recent years, even when requirements for financial reporting by the candidates were generally less atrin-gent than they are now, have far

For example, the $7.7 million estimated by the nonpartisan Citizens Research Foundation to have been spent by Nelson A. Rockefeller in winning reelection as governor of New York in 1970 was roughly three times the Tower total. The Rockefeller expenditure remains the all-time non-presidential high.

Former Rep. Richard L. Ottlnger reportedly spent about $4 million in both the primary and general election in 1970, in which the Westchester County Demo-crat lost a bid for the Senate to James L. Buckley, Conservative-Republican. In the Texas race this year, Sen. Tower had no primary opposition, but he campaigned as though he did.

Gov. Ronald Reagan of Cali-fornia reported spending $3.5 million in his 1970 campaign, and in the same year Sen. George Murphy of California spent about $2.5 million. He lost to John V. Tunney, a Democrat.

Complete disclosures of expenditures, up to Election Day, are not available in most other congressional races this year because the new Federal Election Campaign Act does not require final reports until the end of January. But when the federal data are published, spending records al-ready available indicate that Sen. Tower's 1972 outlay will be closely followed by that of Sen. Charles H. Percy, R., Il., and then by Sen. Edward W. Brooke,

A Massachusetts race for the House also is believed to have been among the most expensive for that office this year—that of Gerry F. Studds, a Democrat elected to the seat of Hastings Keith, a Republican.

Sen. Tower's financial filing was made in Austin, the state capital. A statement by his Democratic opponent, Barefoot Sanders, reported expenditures of $579.530. This was about one-quarter of Mr. Tower's total, which was beavily underwritten by the national Republican organization and by officials of the savings and loan industry. La. Governor Says Shot Fired New Government By Lawman Killed 2 Students By Kin of Hassan

By Nicholas C. Chriss

BATON ROUGE, La., Nov. 19 .-Gov. Edwin W. Edwards said yesterday that he had "no doubt" that it was a blast of buckshot fired by a deputy sheriff that killed two young black students during violence on the Southern University campus here a few days ago.

Gov. Edwards said that the deputies were "scared to death" and badly trained for such a confrontation, "We'll probably never know which deputy sheriff fired the shot."

The governor also said that he would terminate university president G. Leon Netterville's appointment in July. He said that he thought the 65-year-old administrator was out of touch with

Mr. Netterville has been firing members of the faculty who, he says, encouraged student disruptions. Dr. Joseph Johnson, chairman of the department of physics, received his letter of dismissal Friday. George W. Baker jr., an assistant professor of engineering, received a similar letter yesterday.

Gov. Edwards said that he hoped that, if such a confrontation occurred again, police would not use shotguns "because they ter-rorize the crowd." (The sheriff's deputies used the guns to fire tear-gas cartridges.

The tear-gas cartridges are :den-tical to cartridges of buckshot.) Gov. Edwards said that the students in Thursday's melee in front of the university administration building were looking for trouble. "Neither I, the President nor the Pope could have got them to leave [the occupied building]. They wanted a confrontation. Of course, they didn't want to get shot." Gov. Edwards also said that he was ready to accede to all of the demands of the students and would welcome their participa-tion in the school administration. But he would not agree to a complete take-over of the campus, he said.

France Joins in Spain's Basque Repression By Jonathan C. Randal echoed by more moderate French

PARIS, 'Nov. 19 (WP).-By design or by error, the French government is deeply involved in the repression of Basqua political refugees from Spain

In what even normally pro-government French newspapers have denounced as clumsy tactics. political refugees have been forced to move away from the French asque country for vague "official" reasons.

Until this year the French Basques were largely uninterested in the terrorist activities of the militant Spanish Basque organization ETA (standing for "Easque Country and Freedom"). ETA has become the most effecopposition to the Franco regime and demands independence for Spain's 2.2 million

Plot Charged Leftwing French political parties have charged that Interior Minister Raymond Marcellin's recent crackdown on Basqua reiugees in the Pyrénées-Atlantiques department was part of a plot between the Franco regime and France. They argue that for years the Ganllists have sought to protect their growing economic interests in Spain by cracking down on Spanish political refugees in France, many of whom came here when the republicans lost tha Spanish civil war in 1939.

They point to large French antomobile interests in Spain, the manufacture of French AMX-30 tanks there, the sale of Mirage jet fighters and cooperation on civilian aircraft production and joint maneuvers by the French and Spanish armed forces, They also note that France has backed Common Market membership for Spain and that there is a purported high level of cooperation between the Prench and Spanish

Eniwetok Injunction Halts USAF Tests

SYDNEY, Nov. 19 (NYT).-Embattled islanders of Entwetck, in the American-administered Marshall Islands, recently obtained a court injunction haiting a U.S. Air Force program to test the effect of high-explosive detonations on the atoli, already ravaged by more than 30 nuclear blasts.

The Enlwetok case has aroused wide interest in the South Pacific, where Australia and New Zealand have led an unsuccessful campaign to try to persuade France to cease nuclear testing over Mururoa atoli in French Polynesia. More tests at Mururoa are scheduled next year.

The atoll was reserved for yet another battering in an Air Force project called the Pacific Atoll Cratering Experiments. The study involved a series of underground explosions, using TNT, to test the seismic effect and other consequences on the coral structure of an atoll

The incensed Micronesians declared that they would return to Eniwetok by the end of 1972, whether the government gava permission or not. The adminis tration then announced that the atoll would be handed back m 1973, after rehabilitation and removal of any lingering radia-

Members of an advance inspection party led by the two Eniwetok chiefs, Johannis Peter and Lorenzi Jitam, were appalled by the devastation of their atoll when they went back in May, under official sponsorship, for the first time in 25 years.

Three islands enclosing the agoon had disappeared, group reported. A fourth was found "almost gone," a fifth "half gone." A sixth islet had become larger.

The islanders accused the United States of having violated undertakings to the United Nations when Micronesta, for-merly ruled by Japan, became an American trusteeship following World War II, Eniwetok was captured by American forces in bloody fighting in 1944.

The islanders engaged American attorneys from the Micronesian Legal Services Corpora-tion, a project of the Office of Economic Opportunity, and filed suit in the Federal District in Honolulu, charging that the Air Force project violated the National Environmental Policy Act and asking for an injunction halting the activity.

Judge Samuel P. King issued the injunction and scheduled the suit for trial Feb. 13. It was the first time, according to officials. that the protection of the U.S. courts had been extended to complaining Micronesians,

NATO Assembly Begins Five Days Of Talks in Bonn

BONN, Nov. 19 (Reuters).-The North Atlantic Assembly, made up of parliamentarians from NATO member states, opened its annual meeting here today and fixed an agenda for five days of talks.

During private discussions today some 200 delegates from 14 NATO countries were expected to concentrate on critical issues affecting the balance of power between NATO and Communist Warsaw Pact forces in Central Europe.

Other topics include the planned all-European security conference, preparations for which begin three days from now in Helsinki, and exploratory consultations on force reductions in Europe.

The agenda provides for two days of closed committee meet-ings tomorrow, and Tuesday there will be a three-day plenary session, which is to be addressed by the NATO Secretary-General, Joseph Luns, and West German Chancellor Willy Brandt.

Soviet Military Aid Is Risk To Less Developed Country

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19 possibly as many as 10,000 (NYT),-A U.S. government intelligence study reports that in 1971 the Soviet Union supplied $1.1 billion worth of military assistance to the less developed countries. This total, continuing the pattern began in 1970 of sharply increased military aid to nations in the Middle Fast, Asia and Africa, does not include arms sales and deliveries to North Vietnam, North Korea, Cubs and the Eastern European countries in the Warsaw Pact alliance.

The study, prepared by the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research, also reported that total economic asistance to underdeveloped countries by the Soviet Union, East-ern Europe and China reached $1.7 billion in 1971.

The burean, which noted that much of this data was not available in Communist countries publications, said that the bulk of Soviet military assistance went last year, as it did in 1970, to the Middle East and India. Other intelligence officials said that Soviet military aid to North Vietnam was estimated in 1971 et only $100 million. Most of the Soviet Union's deliveries of sophisticated weaponry to North Vietnam were made between 1966 and 1967. With North Vietnam, intelligence officials said the total Soviet military assistance abroad last year was $1.2 billion. Arms for the Eastern European countries were believed to be handled through sales contracts.

Comparison With U.S. The Soviet military aid program in 1971 was considerably below that of the United States. During that year the United States expended $3.28 billion, of which $1.87 billion was for South

Between 1965 and 1971, officials said, Moscow provided North Vietnam with ; out $1 billion in military assistance. China re-portedly gave Hanoi $85 million in military aid in 1970 and $75 million in 1971.

to President Sukarno's ouster in $700 million during this period, with nearly one-half going to The report showed that Soviet military aid to the less developed countries was $830 million in 1961 this presumably including Cuba and $875 million in 1964. The level of this Soviet aid then reportedly dropped to $260 million in 1965 and $330 million in 1969. Middle East Aid

In 1970, this effort rose abruptly to $1.06 billion, most likely as a result of massive deliveries to Egypt, Iraq and India. Until July, 1972, the report said, the Soviet Union maintained 16,480 military personnel, mostly advisers, in more than 12 countries. The largest group-12,500 -was stationed in Egypt, but

400-Yard Trip On British Rails P operatives, according Leads to Strike

LONDON, NOV. 19 (UPI),-Britain faces a 24-hour national rail strike Thursday because two inspectors moved an experimental train 400 yards.

"I don't see how it can be called off," said Ray Buckton, general secretary of the 29,000-member engineers' and firemen's union. He said members would not report for work after midnight Wednesdar.

The dispute centers on a 150mile-an-hour passenger train being developed in Derby. Since August union members have refused to operate the train until a new pay deal is worked out.

Mr. Buckton said that on Priday a diesel locomotive, manned by two British rail inspectors instead of a unioo crew, moved the experimental train from a Derby research center to work-shops 400 yards away, thus caus-

Italian Treasury Minister Vows To Bring Back the 10-Lire Coin

ROME Nov. 19 (Reuters),-Treasury Minister Giovanni Malagodi reassured parliament yesterday that be has taken action to remedy a minor economic crisis—a nationwide shortage of small change.

The steady disappearance of the 10-lire piece is causing increasing concern in high places. For, although the featherweight aluminum coin has an actual value of virtually nothing, it is important to residents of apartment houses with elevators operated with them.

The 10-line piece has become so hard to find that bars and newsstands have resorted to giving customers candy and chewing gum for change. No one is quite sure where the coins have gone, but one theory is that housewives are using them as backing for buttons. They are cheaper than the real thing. Me. Malagodi told a parliamentary questioner that he had ordered new machines from abroad to make the coins and was hoping to enlarge the state mint to solve the problem,

Fifty-one civil-rights advocates. led by Andrei D. Sakharov, the physicist, have appealed to the Supreme Soviet to grant amnesty to political prisoners for this year's 50th anniversary of the formation of the Soviet Union. A second appeal, signed by most of the same petitioners, calls for abolition of the death penalty in the Soviet Union on the ground that "it conflicts with feelings of morality and cannot be justified by any general social interests." The death penalty is imposed in the Soviet Union for "especially dangerous crimes against the state." such as treason.

The two documents were submitted Sept. 13, just before the Supreme Soviet, as the national legislature is known, met for one of its brief sessions to endorse measures adopted by the Soviet leadership. The appeals elicited no response, and the texts have now been made available to West-

Belgium Acts To Cut Back Armed Forces

BRUSSELS, Nov. 19 (Reuters) The Belgian government Friday approved a package of defense cuts which will reduce the country's armed forces by several thousands and take two months off compulsory military service. The ceiling on regular forces will come down from 54,688 to just over 47,000, and the number of draftees will drop from the niaximum permitted 46,111 to 40,000. The officer corps will be cut by nearly 1,000 to 6,490. Belgium has discussed the plan with its NATO allies here and while there was no official re-action from the alliance's beadquarters, informed sources said the cuts were not welcome there. A large proportion of Belgium's operational troops are stationed in West Germany, where the period of conscript service is to be reduced from 12 to 10 months. This is unlikely to find favor with NATO defense experts, who feel that one year is the minimum

ern campaign were happily out of town last week as the search for a scapegoat closed in on Jean Westwood, chairman of the Democratic National Committee for the last four months. Frank Manklewicz, the cam-

O'Brien, the late-arriving campalen "chairman," was enjoying the theater in New York, confident that power in the party would find its way back to regular professionals like himself.

Back in the capital, the handy, isolated target of the Democrats' frustration was the pixie-faced, gravel-voiced Mrs. Westwood, the 43-year-old mink farmer, grand-mother of nine and Utah National Committeewoman whom Senator McGovern put in charge

ped in the shroud of mystery he loves, President Nixon was deposited by hellcopter last week behind the high, protective fence at Camp David, Md., to deliberate on the changes he hopes to make in his own official family and

The scenario was vaguely familiar and so were the players. The ubiquitous H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, his two senior assistants on domestic matters, joined the President at the outset. More eminent cargo arrived in midweek-John B. Connally, a trusted former cabinet member, and Roy Ash, an efficiency expert from the West Coast who helped design and promote the President's first efforts to reorganize the executive branch three years ago.

Then, at week's end, in trooped the cahinet members, like so many schoolboys visiting the principal to learn whether they had passed or failed. Each had been asked to bring recommendations for revising his respective department. But what they really wanted to know was how the President planned to dispose of

These senior officials were, in turn, merely the vanguard of about 2,000 high-echelon govern-ment servants left behind in Washington, nervously waiting for the ax to fall, Mr. Nixon had asked for their resignations the day after the election, It seemed clear that most would be reappointed. Nevertheless, one had a sense last week of watching tha. curtain go up on a mass cor-porate execution.

Startling, Ironic

It was all rather startling and not without its ironles. Mr. Nixon had spoken often of how much he valued his senior associates. When he appointed them in 1968, he called attention to their "extra dimension," During the campaign, he said that he saw no need to break up what he called a "winning team." Then, less than 24 hours after he learned of his overwhelming victory, he dropped the benign and fatherly pose. He called his loyal team together, reminded them of the hallowed custom whereby appointees ritualistically submit resignations when a president is re-elected and-in case anyone missed the point-had his press he expected just such resignations, and fast.

Why had Mr. Nixon chosen to follow his triumph with a bloodletting? There are some sure reasons. He is convinced that the bureaucracy is riddled with mediocrity. He believes that any institution needs a good shakingup from time to time-another unassailable managerial precept. And he feels that, if he is to bend the bureancracy to his will, he can best do it with people not wedded to old ways.

One can only speculate about other motives. Mr. Nixon does not intend to offer extensive new programs next year, and, therefore, some skeptics believe that all the talk about reorganization

WASHINGTON (NYT).—Wrap- and reshuffling is designed to substitute for any real legislative

Watergate Aspect

Others, meanwhile, see the enterprise as at least partially designed to repair some of the iamage of the Watergate affair by sacrificing some of those whose names were linked to it, even though the President's aides steadfastly insist that he not only believes, but will stick to, earlier denials that his senior men were involved in political espionage. Some of Mr. Nixon's top appointees are certain to leave of their own volition. Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird, for example, wishes to turn to other, unspecified pursuits (indeed, there are reports that he may have long-range presidential ambitions of his own!. Others will depart by mutual consent, such as George Romney, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, who was very nearly tossed out in in the suburbs. The positions of Secretary of Labor James D. Hodgson and Attorney General Richard Kleindienst are thought to be shaky, the former because he is not liked by George Meany, Mr. Nixon's new ally, and the latter because he was involved in the unsavory ITT affair and perhaps—more to the point—because some influential members of the White House staff are not exactly wild about him.

Men whose ideological hent is inconsistent with the President's clearly are especially vuinerable. Last week, for example, the White House asked for and received the resignation of the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, chairman of the Civil Rights Commission. Father Hesburgh's predecessor had refused to acquiesce to a similar request from President Johnson eight years ago, but it was evident that intense pressure had been brought on the Noire Dame president, who has been an outspoken. critic of the President's antibusing policy.

Domestic 'Czar'

What Mr. Nixon does with his top people will be affected by his plans for the bureaucracy. The shuffling of bodies is only one component of his plans to re-design the executive branch. And while it is only lively speculation. at the moment, there is talk that the President may end np creating a domestic "czar" to keep an eye on federal programs in much the same way that Henry A. Kissinger has been running who may have tired of their characters.

Mr. Connally has been mentioned as the man most likely to be "czar"-if indeed such a post is created. But Mr. Connally has also been suggested as a possible secretary of state, should Mr. Nixon decide to dispose of William P. Rogers, Still,

if that happens, what about Mr.

present job? Elliott Richardson at HEW? Donald Rumsfeld at the Cost of Living Council? William. Ruckelshaus at the Environmental Protection Agency?

A cautionary note should be added: the players come and go, but the bureaucracy remains, Any real rearrangement of the way in which the federal government distributes its largesse to the ordinary folk requires much more than new faces. It requires carefully planned legislation, and, therefore congressional acquiescence. Mr. Nixon can do only .

As U.S., Cuba Edge Toward Dialogue

A Long-Closed Door Opens a Bit

By Tad Szulc

to survive the diplomacy of the Nixon era centers on 90 miles of blue water between the United States and Cuba. Last week it seemed possible—just possible that the spirit of detente had found a new opening in the Caribbean Administration spokesmen ied by Secretary of State William P. Rogers uttered the first kind words to be poblicly addressed to the Castro government since diplomatic relations between Washington and flavana were broken nearly 12 years ago. The occasion for this sudden American courtesy toward Cuba was the Cubans' unusually cooperative attitude in the handling the two latest hijackings of American airliners to Havana. Cuba proposed that the two governments negotiate a "broad agreement" to curb nerial piracy.

But Cuba simultaneously proposed that they negotiate an end to what Havana regards as hostila acts against it by the United States. Therefore, whila both governments generally confined themissue of hijacking-Havana made it clear that it had come to resent the reputation of being the principal haven for criminal or demented hijackers—the inevitable ques-tion was whether a way was also being opened for a wider normalization of relations.

Signs of Change

For the record senior American officials insisted all week that hijacking was the only subject they were interested in negotiating with the regime of Premier Fidel Castro. Nevertheless, there were diplomats and even administration officials here who thought they detected signs of possible change:

 Cuba's proposal to negotiate appeared to have caught the Nixon administration by surprise. But so eager were American officials to obtain some kind of anti-hijacking accord that they tacitly agreed to take up with Havana-even in face-to-face talks-the Cuban complaints over alleged hijacking of Cuban ships, raids by Cuban exiles, and American "aid" to Cubans "illegally" leaving the island.

• The carefully drafted Cuban statements and diplomatic notes pointedly mention the Americanpromoted "economic blockade" of Cuba. Havana may be signalling cause local conditions failed to meet Castroite' hopes for major uprisings and that the threat is negligible today. They also regard the problem of Soviet military power based in Cuba as a manageable one. The United States, moreover, is aware that more and more Latin-American nations are determined to end the isolation

Havana, too, may be under pressure to review its uncompromising position.

Boycott Hurts

Cuba has been hurt by the American economic boycott, in-cluding the elimination of its sugar quota on the subsidized U.S. market. There is some reason to Wonder whether Mr. Castro wants to remain so completely dependent on Soviet assistance and gridance. Some diplomats even wonder whether Moscow may not be gently nudging the Cubans toward some improvement in relations with Washington. The Cuban connection has been cost-ing the Russians about $500 million annually for the last 10 years.

The "signalling" between Washington and Havana is still too hesitant for any firm predictions. But the standing Washington sally that Henry A. Klasinger is really America was never very real be- suddenly become less of a loke.

Japan Exports Its Culture To U.S. to Improve Image

(NYT) .-- At a time when its relations with the United States are emerging from one of the most difficult periods in recent years, the Japanese government is hoping to speed the recovery of good feeling through an ambi-tious new program of educational and cultural exchange aimed chiefly at improving the country's image here.

The exchange program, which leaders hope will eventually establish stronger nonpolitical and noncommercial ties between the two countries, is intended to enable Americans from academic and other fields to visit there under the auspices of the Japan Foundation and to export selected Japanese cultural attractions to this country. The foundation, a quasi-

Its officials promise that the proeram will be expanded later as more money becomes available. Hidemi Kon, Japanese novelist and former deputy minister of culture, who is the foundation's first president, has been m Washington since last week to meet with Nixon administration officials and members of his

NLF's '69 Plan Totally Included In Peace Draft

Washington and Hanoi hold further peace negotiations in Paris, it is important to examine the extent of "compromise" by each side up to this time. In government of South Vietners particular, the current draft installed reflecting national of agreement should be critically viewed in light of past proposals by the Communist side. At his Oct. 26 news conference, presidential side Henry Kissinger said: "This settlement is a compromise settlement in which neither side achieves everything. . . We do not consider this a coalition government, and we believe that President Thieu was speaking about previous versions of a Communist plan and not this version of a Communist

But a careful examination of the Hanoi-Washington draft agreement reveals that, contrary to Mr. Kissinger's remarks, tha Communist side has not only made almost no compromises in its original demands but, as the agreement now stands, it may have scored important gains.

The lack of Communist conces sions includes the question of the fate of President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam. In its original 1939 proposal, the Com-munist side did not demand Mr. Thieu's onster. This demand was made only later, as American forces began withdrawing-from South Vietnam. Hanoi then employed the bargaining tactic of raising its price two or three times above what it was really prepared to settle for, a practice as common in Vietnam as else-

Not only do the contents of the draft agreement bear a striking resemblance to the original version of the Communist plan, but the language does as well, suggesting that the essence of the draft actually was presented to Mr. Kissinger by Hanoi, rather than resulting from step-by-step joint effort.

Basic Position

Although there have been several proposals from the Commn-nist side over the last few years. Hanol's original and basic position was contained in a four-1965. The National Liberation Front's basic position was contained in its 10-point plan proposed on May 8, 1969. Since the NLF plan was derived directly from the Hanoi plan, comparison here is made between the 1969 NLF plan and the current Hanoi-Washington draft pact.

The English version of the 1969 NLF 10 points cited here was the one provided by the NLF delegation itself in Paris, so there is no possibility of misunderstandcaused by translation difficulties. The text of the Hanoi-Washington draft accord is from Hanoi radio's broadcast of Oct. 26.

'New Politics' in Latin America

The United States isn't the only country in the hemisphere whose politics center on efforts to assemble a constituency adequate to sustain social change. In Argentina and Chile, the problem is being worked out, or at least worked on, in particularly dramatic and individual ways.

At center stage in Argentina, of course, is the spectacular return from his 17 years of exile of former dictator Juan Peron, ousted by coup in 1955. He was let back by the current Argentine leader, Gen. Alejandro Lanusse, who had himself been imprisoned earlier by Mr. Peron for three years. Gen. Lanusse acted principally out of his conviction that Argentina needs a restoration of civilian rule. Yet no such restoration could be made without an appropriate role being offered the huge constituency, perhaps 35 percent of the electorate, which still celebrates Mr. Peron as the hero of the "shirtless ones," the working class. One hopes that Juan Peron will respond to the good faith shown by Gen. Lanusse by bringing to bear the considerable political skill and sense of responsibility that will be required to guide his followers wisely. He is the key

In Chile, though the details are less electric, the purpose to move the country ahead—is the same. President Salvador Allende, an avowed Marxist, was elected two years ago, with only 36 percent of the vote. Unsurprisingly, his attempts since to implement his program have met with massive resistance. So polarized and pregnant with violence did the situation become that Mr. Allende has now had to bring into his cabinet three military men, including the army commander in chief, in order to placate his political opposition. This is a new role for the historically apolitical Chilean military. Whether it gives Mr. Allende the breathing period he needs if he is to cope with Chile's economic crisis—the result of political dislocation, inflation, falling copper prices and loss of general credit worthiness-is the next crucial question.

Argentina is in the news because of its military government's experiment in trying to move toward representative civilian rule. Chile is in the news because of its elected government's experiment in trying to install socialism by democratic means. These are serious political movements. They derive from deep social currents. They address the central contemporary requirement of popular participation. They place extraordinary demands on the political leadership. Those of us in the United States accustomed to thinking in the terms of old stereotypes of Latin affairs have much to study in the "new politics" of Latin America.

Renewed Negotiations in Paris

A sense of relief greets the news that Henry A. Kissinger is in Paris for that longawaited and, hopefully, final meeting with North Vletnam's peace negotiators.

Americans concerned about the Vietnam war have been puzzled-wives and families of prisoners painfully so-at the slow pace of diplomacy since Oct, 26, the day Mr. Kissinger announced that "peace is within reach, in a matter of weeks or less."

Three of those weeks have gone by, and the interim has brought disturbing hints of slippage in the accord so painstakingly worked out, even to the White House spokesman's remark that there would still have to be "further consultations with the South Vietnamese and perhaps with the North Vietnamese." Despite Mr. Kissinger's specific initial assurance to Hanol and the American public that one more meeting would clinch the peace, the obstructions raised by President Nguyen Van Thleu in Saigon have gummed up the timetable, though proiessions of confidence still exude from the White House that a cease-fire and return of prisoners will be reality by Christmas.

It is premature to pass judgment on this tantalizing period of renewed uncertainty. Nation and world await delivery on the preelection White House pronouncement that "peace is at hand."

The Soft-Drink Détente

Somewhere out there on the steppes an underground poet may be scrawling the forbidden words, "It's the Real Thing-Coke Is!" But the Iron Curtain is still down for Coca-Co:a now that a deal has been made between the Ministry of Trade and Peosi-Cola for exclusive bottling and distribution rights in the Soviet Union. The "Pepsi Generation" is about to explode with a fizz from the Ukraine to Siberia.

After all the years of branding American economic and military adventures as "Coca-Colonization." It was inevitable that Moscow could not swallow such a symbol of the icecold war. But the monopoly granted to Pepsi shows how much carbonated water has flowed over the dam since Nikita Khrushchev posed in 1959 with a Pepsi set-up in his hand at Vice-President Nixon's urging.

The soft-drink detente is not just onesided, of course. In return, the wine division of Pepsico., Inc., will be trying to induce Americans to buy Soviet vocks, champagne brandy and other potables-none quite so soft as Pepsl. It will be interesting to see what the boys on Madison Avenue will be able to compose with the one Russian vodka import they now promote here. It's called Stolichnaya, Stolichnaya?

International Opinion

U.S.-Cuban Contacts

To speak of a reconciliation between Washington and Havana certainly would be premature. Skrjacking most evidently has become a plague for both the United States and Cuba. This alone would justify the Cuban move of Oct. 30. By taking the initiative, the Cubans are not afraid of giving the impression they are extending a hand to the abhorred United States. The latter has seen it as a "gesture" and, without being able yet to foresee its significance, has declared it "encouraging." The Cuban propositions are being carefully studied by the State Department, which, it has been noticed, has not hesitated to acknowledge their receipt publicly in encouraging terms. The fact that a bona fide, pressing offer is involved is evidenced by the reaction of the Association of American Airline Pilots, which immediately called for opening negotiations along the lines indicated by the Cuban notes.

The discussions to which the text might lend itself are not yet very clear. It is obvious, for example, that the United States could not accept total reciprocity, which would surrender to the Cuban authorities Cuban nationals escaping from their country aboard a plane or a ship. The resentments that have accumulated on both sides for more than 10 years will not dry off with the ink of a treaty that would put an end to the doings of skyjackers trusting too much in the anti-Americanism of Cuba. Yet, this collaboration, if ever established, would demonstrate to both nations that they have at least grounds for agreement and that an exchange of friendly services implying mutual good faith is not impossible. Hence, why shouldn't slow progress be made toward a normalization of relations unnatural in their present form? President Nixon's visits to Peking and Moscow have opened new perspectives for a detente which, as it further develops every year, proportionately increases the isolation of Cuba. After a long and calamitous experiment in insular socialism, Mr. Castro perhaps wishes to break this isolation. And the United States now enjoys a diplomatic credit restored sufficiently to meet him half way.

-From Le Monde (Paris).

Curbing Pollution of the Seas It is well that the intergovernmental conference on the control of sea pollution succeeded in resolving national differences in favor of global action in a convention stretching beyond territorial waters to the whole sea. The treaty provides a firm and comprehensive base for control by which a complete ban is to be imposed on the dumping of such wastes as pesticides and radioactive wastes which affect marine life or endanger human life. It is not expected that the major countries will have much difficulty in ratifying the treaty, though the less advanced may well need financial and technical assistance in solving the problems of cost, inspection and enforcement. In the meantime the importat point is that the legal and moral responsibility for preventing the pollution of the seas has been clearly spelied out and generally recognized.

The Cuban Connection

WASHINGTON.-For the first United States no longer tries to W time in many irears, the United States and Culta have a common problem, which may lead to reappraisal of the relations en the two countries. President Nixon doesn't want American commercial airplanes to be hijacked to Havans and Fillel Castro, according to the Swis, doesn't want them to land there, and this is now under the most careful if oblique diplomatic dis-

Mr. Nixon's problem is very simple. He wants securre, co-time air traffic within the United States and abroad, but the American air traffic is not secure, it is not on time, for passengers are subjected to security baggage checks at every airport, primarily for fear of criminals who regard Cuba as a sanctuary. Fidel Castro's problem is a little more complicated. He is waging an ideological war egainst the United States and Latin America, and vice versa, but most of the Americans who hijacid planes are not Communists seeking sanctuary in Cuba but ordinary criminals stealing planes, demanding millions in ransom money and hoping to get both the money and freedom when they land (in Havana.

On the testimony of Swiss officials, who represent the United States in Havana, this is not what happens. They say that the Cuban government is not sympathetic but very tough on the hijackers, who are jailed under very severe circumstances.

Also Suspiczous

According to the thwiss diplomats, the Cuban government is not only tough on the hijackers, but suspicious that there hijacking operations may be rised by the United States as a means to spy on what's going on he Cuba.

Accordingly, Castro is not sending back the hijacities to the United States because he suspects them of subversive intellige activities against Cube, and he is keeping them in jall because he doesn't trust them, even if they have Communist backgrounds. Also, Castro, again according to the Swiss, is holding the ranson money that lands in Havana with the hijackers, not because he wants to help the Rujackers but because the U.S. Treasury impounded between $60 million and $70 million in Cuban assets when Washington broke diplomatic relations with Havana, and he wants to use this hijack thoney to get the $50 million to $70 million back. What troubles off cials here in Washington is that one of these hijackings to Cube may end in a disaster and that the American people, already incomyenienced by baggage checks and long delays in air travel, may them revive the Cuban crisis by demanding that action be taken against the Havana sanctuary.

The Nixon admin stration, annoyed as it is by (Austro's anti-

American propagatela and subversion in Latin América, would prefer to leave bad enough alone, and let Castro suffer in isolation with his own economic failures

Duel Purposes

But this will not be easy if Cuba continues to be a sanctuary for skyjackers. The United States has been paying attle attention to Latin America in the last few years. Meanwhile, the Soviet Union has established a keep-out doctrine in Eastern Europe and China will be doing much the same in Southeast Asia, while the wants to reach an understanding with Brezhnev in Moscow and Chou En-lai in Peking but won't even talk to Castro in Cube. This is undoubtedly wby, after the most private talks with the Swiss in Washington and Geneva, Secretary of State Rogers has made it clear in public that the United States now wishes to try to reach an accommodation with Castro on this entire problem. Accommodations between nations come about in strange ways, as was obvious last year in the Kissinger visit to Peking. The skyjacking problem has now forced Washington and Havana to talk again, however indirectly, and it could result in a new appraisal of President Nixon's relations with Latin America, which by his own admission is long clarify the guidelines for West Germany's immediate future. "Great leaders." he said. "derive from chaos-like war or racking crises. And it is a good thing that we do not have chaos in our part of the world nowadays. This doesn't, of course, preclude the existence of leaders with great infinence. mediocrity. You know, this reminds me of my very last talk with Gen de Gaulle. That was in 1969, shortly after Nixon had first been elected President of the United States, and De Gaulle asked me what I thought of him.

"I said that for me he had demonstrated among other things that he represented a strong ar-gument against those who say that men at the age of 50 cannot develop. The general was most interested in that observation and he agreed heartily."

De Gaulle, it may be recalled, ended the 50s of his own life in a political wilderness where he undoubtedly matured his reflections on the methods and purposes of government. And certainly Brandt, who will soon be grew in wisdom during the period immediately preceding 1969 and his final succession to power.

One thing he has clearly learned is the value of patience and of limited steps toward distant goals. Thus, while keeping in mind ultimate dreams of bringing two Germanys together, he is content not to press uselessly for this final aim until history changes the picture's European

He wants to make life easier and improve contacts between West and East Germans, thus contributing to a relaxation of tensions. And, where possible, he hones to better the lot of German minorities elsewhere, as in the Soviet Union, where his ambition has already met with some response by Moscow. It is not for nothing that realpolitik is a German word. Brandt seeks to adjust his visions to the realities that impose their limitations. Such deliberate selfrestriction disappoints some of his opponents and infuriates others. We will not know until

This approach to patient guidance along a step-by-step path toward final objectives still but dimly discerned is perhaps the special feature of Brandt's leadership. Whether he can continue average of industrial stocks closed above 1,000, which it had never done before. The Wall Street Journal, which compiles the average, alleged that this event "set champagne corks popping in brokerage offices across the country."

By Richard E. Mooney NEW YORK, NOV. 19 (NYT). -Last Tuesday, the Dow Jones

And without so much as a caveat emptor, a major brokerage house proclaimed in large advertisements here and elsewhere that it would be holding a "special DJ 1,000 seminar" at all of its many branch offices.

The following day, with less fanfare, the New York office of the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that the unemployment rate among teen-age male Puerto Ricans in this city is 40—yes. 40—percent. No cham-pagne. No special seminars.

These two statistics, on their face, tell starkly different stories. bot this is not the point of citing them together here. Rather, the point is to suggest that the consumer of statistics should look before leaping to conclusions.

Take unemployment. A 40 percent rate is shocking by anyone's standards. It is not possible to say whether the rate has been rising or falling in this case because it has not been calculated for earlier years on any compara-ble basis. It is a fact, however, that this group of young men comes out the very worst of the whole New York poverty sector, and it is possible to assess the figure from still two other direc-

Seen one way, even 40 percent is an understatement. The number of Puerto Rican teen-age boys who are out of work in New York is probably even more than the $1,000 face-valued bonds ex-(Continued on Page 11, Col. 7) do not include those who would work if they could find jobs but have quit looking. Seen another way, the 40 per-time, when life was easier, the average used to be computed simply by adding up their prices at a given moment and dividing by the number of stocks.

But the life of Dow Jones has long since been complicated by stock splits and stock dividends and by the removal of some stocks from the list (Victor Talking Machine was one) and the addition of others. So now the divisor is not a simple 30 but an adjustable n u m b e r-currently 1.661—that compensates for all these changes.

Other stock price averages,

South opened normally with one diamond and West overcalled one heart. North had plenty in reserve for his jump to two notrump, and South could simply have raised to game. However, it seemed to him that a suit contract would be superior, especially if North heid only a single stopper in hearts. He hid three spades to show an unbalanced hand, and North revicwed the situation.

It was not clear that South held more than a minimummost experts would not regard this as a true strength-showing reverse. But it was clear that the North-South hands would mesh excellently. North's high-card points in his partner's suits would fill gaps, and he held two aces in the other suits. The only wasted card was the heart jack.

North therefore planned to play six diamonds, and hid Blackwood en route to make sure that the partnership was not missing

TRANSPARENT THINGS By Vladimir Nabokov. McGraw-Hill. 104 pp. $5.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

"Transparent Things," Vladimir Nabokov's 16th and latest novel and his seventh to be composed in English, one comes across what I construed to be a Nabokovian elbow in the ribs, another helpful reminder from the master to his readers. At the point when it appears, the novel's hero—Hugh Person, an American book editor is lying in hed, about to fall into a deep sleep in which he will somnambulistically strangle to death his already deeply alceping wife. As he drifts off, Hugh worries "that his wife was again feigning a feminine ailment to keep him away; that she probably cheated in many other ways . . . that no manner of . . . temporary dissatisfaction mattered in the face of his ever growing, ever more tender, love for his wife; that he would have to consult an ophthalmologist sometime next mouth [sic]. He sobstituted an 'n' for the wrong letter [in mouth] ... continued to scan the motley proof into which the blackness of closed vision was now turning, South showed an ace, North and drifted into his murderous Now Hugh's typographical error and correction here is partly meant by Nabokov to be a joke heart king. South won with the on Hugh's having spent the eve-ning proofreading the galleys of His best chance for avoiding a novel. But, as I've said, I also took it as a Nabokovian nudge. For hy equating Hugh's nightthe club loser was to hope that thoughts with words on a page,

A threebefore: that in the world of Nathree break, desirable in other bokov's fiction, the print on the page is at least as real as, if not circumstances, was likely to be more so than, the imagined world At the second trick, South led the print conjures up. the spade king from dummy, And so, having been thus re-West took the ace and shifted minded, I tried for a while to to his singleton trump. South view "Transparent Things" as a won the diamond jack in the dummy, and led to the diamond self-contained world in itself, First, I tried to cross-reference the words conscientiously and play the anagrammatical game like a sport. I conceded that Hugh Person is only just so many words on the page—the creation of an-other character in the novel named R., a German writer who has adopted English as his written language, who now lives in Switzerland, and whose latest novel Hugh has been proofreading on the evening of the strangling and that therefore 'Transparent Things" is cut off from reality like two mirrors facing each other and reflecting each other's images infinitely. Why, I insighted cleverly, the most substantial thing in the entire book is a writing implement—the pencil that Hugh Person finds in a hotel room in Switzerland and that Nabokov, or R., writes about as if it were novel. Next, I noted the that abound in the story, and I untangled the complex verbal prefigurations of not only Hugh's strangling of his wife, but also the hotel fire that Hugh dies in at the end. I persuaded myself that these coincidences and prefigurations serve to collapse the

JUST before the climax of space and time of the story a single point in spaceting namely, the spacetime where/y Hugh is metaphorically const by his passion (or the "flat of his love) and dies (or re is transfigured "from one ; of being to another").

Finally, I tried to equate ition of Transparent Thi in Nabokov's canon to the "The Tempest" in Shakespe —to view this novel as the cu nation of Nabokov's lifeloog I ary preoccupations; as his de ration that, as he puts it, "rea dreamlike nature" must has "vanishing point"; and as his (à la Prospero) of abjuring "rough magic" by burning realistic pencil—the symbol of art in that final symbolic But my heart wasn't really i

I no how Hugh dislikes his father, how on the night of the old m. death, Hugh feels a "general se of liberation" and sleeps with woman for the first time in life. I could hardly ignore that is this same woman, a prestit who appears in Hugh's dre while he is throttling his war. And finally, if one is to t Hugh's "misprinting" of mo for month as anything more ti joke-and it is usually risky to do so with Nabokovian joke then it is no more far-fetched read it as Hugh's unconsci verbal slip (the associative clts linking "month" to "female. ment" to menses to vagina & tata, and coming out "mout than to take it as a reminder see Nabokov's art as pure ver patterns.

TAKING A SEAT-Estaban DeJesus knocks down lightweight champion Roberto Duran in first round of nontitle bout and goes on to win a unanimous decision.

Duran Loses Bout, But Not His Title

By Dean McGowen

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (NYT).-Roberto Duran is the world lightweight champion and the uncrowned street-fighting champion of his native Panama City. But he is not the master of Puerto Rico's Esteban DeJesus, DeJesus, who wears the 135-pound crown of Puerto Rico, gave Duran a complete boxing lesson last night at Madison Square Garden, knocking him down in the first round and scoring a unanimous 10-round decision.

It was Duran's first defeat in 32 fights. Although Duran is supposed to be a rough, vicious puncher, it was DeJesus who supplied the fireworks from the outset of the bristling bont.

DeJesus caught Duran moving forward in the opening minute and nailed him with a stinging left book on the point of the chin. The champlon, who was not defending his title in this over-the-weight scrap, landed on his seat, a look of complete amazement on his handsome face. Duran bounced up almost immediately as the count had reached two by Arthur Mercante, the referee.

That was the first time the Panamanian, 21, had ever been knocked off his feet. It was as much of a surprise to him as it was to the crowd of 9,144.

After having established his own punching prowess, DeJesus began a boxing lesson that was complete. Mercante scored the light five rounds for DeJesus, four to Duran, with one

Judge Harold Lederman favored DeJesus, 6 to 3 with 1 even, and the other judge, Bill Recht, scored the bout 6 to 2, DeJesus, with 2

USC Shows UCLA Proof of Top Rating

By Dave Brady

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 19 (WP). 10-0 in the second period and Southern California reinforced a consensus that it is the best team in the nation as it destroyed UCLA, 24-7, last night.

Tailback Anthony Davis probed the right side of the Bruins' defenses all night as quarterback Mike Rae handed the ball off to him 26 times and he netted 178 yards rushing, including 23 yards for the first of three touchdowns the Trojans belted out on the USC remained unbeaten by winning its 10th straight game and locked up the berth as the Pacific-Eight Conference's representative in the Rose Bowl.

Armed with the nation's No. 2 rushing offense, UCLA attempted to engage the Trojans in a gamelong infantry war. USC came into the game with the best rushing defense in the nation, and showed why. The Trojans marched 76, 80 and

96 yards for touchdowns by Davis, reserve tailback Rod McNeill and Rae, after Rae opened the scoring with a 32-yard field goal. Quarterback Mike Harmon of the Bruins did take them 75 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter after the Trojans went ahead to stay with 10 points in the first six minutes. But for some reason, Harmon attempted only one pass in the first half, unsuccessful, and he completed only three of nine for the evening. His first completion was brought off after 46 minutes, 37 seconds had elapsed.

Orange Bowl-bound Notre Dame survived in a shower of oranges yesterday, winning a 20-17 decision over Miami of Florida when a Hurricane field-goal attempt went wide with 91 seconds Notre Dame, now 8-1, scored twice in the opening 12 minutes and, each time, the partisan fans littered the field with oranges. But Miami (4-5) marched to two touchdowns in the final quarter. Quarterback Ed Carney led a 78-yard toucbdown drive, completing six of eight passes for 76 yards—four of them to Walter Sweeting for 60 yards, including a 14-yard scoring toss. Carney then capped a 68-yard scoring drive by running over from the one,

Strange Buses

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON—The gods have buses that come in their own their equals at malicious good time is invariably sheeplike. whimsy in the buses, the buses No one would think to step that bumble and snort through the streets of almost every ac-America, taking cursed city in on desperate human accretion at one street corner, ejecting it at another, clanking, grinding, spewing out foul black stenches. Those buses! Those buses: they have been the same for

40 years. Thirty years for certain. No wonder America abandoned them and took a hundred million cars downtown. At this very street corner, for example, there is a sign that says "Bus stop." Buses do, in fact, stop here. No one ever gets on them, although there is a large group of people standing here waiting for a bus and although the temperature is 5 degrees below zero and the buses that stop are warm and empty.

This is because everyone in the large group of people requires a bus that goes to Chevy Chase Circle, and none of the warm, empty buses that pause momentarily wishes to go to Chevy

They all prefer to go to Glover Park or to MacArthur Boulevard, Is there such a place as Glover Park? MacArthur Boulevard? If so, what manner of places may they be that exert such powerful stractions on empty buses?

The night ticks sway in fiveminute blocks of ice while squadrons of warm, empty buses march happily off to Glover Park end MacArtbur Boulevard and the large group awaiting transport to Chevy Chase Circle swells into a vast horde, The temper of hordes awaiting

Lewis Mumford Honored

NEW YORK, Nov. 19 (AP) .--Lewis Mumford, the social philosopher and author, has been named winner of the National Book Committee's 1973 national medal for literature. The award, which carries a $5,000 cash prize, will be presented to Mr. Mumford Dec. 13.

aboard a warm, empty Glover Park bus and, holding fist gunlike in cost pocket, declare: "This is a hijacking! This bus is going to Chevy Chase Circle!"

The buses know this about the crowds they pass on street corners. It is one reason they treat these crowds with such contempt.

One fancies the bus lounging around a bar out in Glover Park the favorite rush-hour hangout for the transit company's rolling stock-making insulting remarks about milksops who want to go to Chevy Chase Circle.

Eventually, of course, B bus marked "Chevy Chase Circle" creaks out of the night. It is sulley and full of self-pity. Some brute of a company director has caught it in the act of sneaking off empty for an early beer with the other buses at Glover Park and has ordered it, instead, to get out and do a little work.

Stopped, baleful, breathing heavily, it dares the waiting horde to try to squeeze aboard. It is already packed, seat and aisle, and it sags low on its springs as though toying with the idea of feigning sudden rupture so that all this lumpen bourgeoisle from Chevy Chase Circle can be ejected and the bus rushed off by busambulance perhaps to the Old Buses' Home at MacArthur Boulevard.

Lurch and crush, Heavy foot at the brakes throws Chevy Chase Circle people forward and back, like elements of s dry manhattan, elbows and ribs blending in silent hostility. Roaring shodders of gears help satisfy the bus's urge to make these people vibrate in payment for all the suffering men have imposed on oppressed bushood. It keeps its interior lights blinking on and off-like submarines being depth-charged in the old war movies-so that envone ettempting to read may be the more inconvenienced. It would be good to live in Glover Park, or MacArthur Boulevard, but the buses do not take it lightly when people try to move there. People, they say at the veighborhood saloon where the buses gather in the evening hour. would lower bus-depot values.

I ONDON (IHT).—The other customers in and Sewage Recycling!" "Get the Lead a coffee bar off Portland Place, being mainly English, pretended not to notice as Prof. Herb Gilbert of the University of British Columbia put on the gleaming hrass antenna, centering the knobbed projections carefully over his frontal fringe in order to insure the best possible reception of high-frequency vibes from outer space.

He explained to his table companion (as the other customers tried very hard not to listen) that the antenna and his other props—including a stunning glass-and-silver amulet filled with iridescent dried fish, which he often wears around his neck-are not really evidence that he has lost his moorings, despite a growing consensus along that line. Nor is he merely an old-fashioned prophet of doom. On the contrary, this 46-year-old Canadian artist is a new-fangled prophet of doom, as up-to-date as tomorrow's paper. His message is not so much "Repent, for tomorrow ye die" as "Pull np your socks, for Christ's sake, and let's try to clean no and preserve this diminishing planet before it's too late."

Sabbatical

Prof. Gilbert, who has been touring Europe since September on a year's sabbatical, underwritten by a Canada Council Arts Award, teaches in Vancouver. He is a member of the university's fine arts faculty. He entered the arts field as a painter and printmaker but for the last couple of years, stirred to action by public apathy. he has shifted his attention increasingly toward the field of "sculptural environments" and what he calls "eco-art: ecological-political art." A big, burly man with seemingly deep reserves of energy despite the lingering effects of a polio siege, Gilbert has launched B one-man guerrille wer against those forces of darkness known collectively as pollution. "Let the scoffers scoff," he has said in effect, "and we'll show them what can be done if you really put your back into it."

Gilbert opeued hostilities with a mimeograph machine, laying down a barrage of press releases, cartoons, graphs and fact sheets, laced with a crackle of incendiary slogans: "Demand Total Garbage

Out!" "Change Some Laws!" "Ban Pesticides and Phosphates!" "Stop a Dam!" "Report a Polluter!" "Listen to the Kids!" "Ride a Bike!" "Learn About Birth Controli" "Get Mad!" "Return Your Empties!"
"Watch a Bird!" "Dip Your Feet in a Brook!" "Don't Wear Wild Furs or Skins!" "Boycott Zoos!" "Drive Less!" "Live More!" "Don't Believe Simple Answers!" "Recycle" This to a Friend!"

Earlier this year Prof. Gilbert (who also likes to be known, for some inscrutable reason, as Al Azim, Sir E. Al Azim, or just Sir Al) founded the Earthling Survival Party (ESP). The party issues lots of membership cards Gilbert's 10-year-old daughter Ellawyn, who is with him in Lon-don, has card No. 3,393,724,224. The party slso issues postcards to be used for reporting back to Headquarters on pollution "seen, smelt, heard, tasted, touched or 'psyched out.'

Prof. Gilbert's current preoccupation with the messy state of the planet began on a visit to South Africa with his wife in the early 1960s. They spent four pleasant years growing bananas and svocados, but eventually the Gilberts found the "social climate" suffocating and decided reluctantly to leave South Africa. They had also heen struck while there by the disastrous decline of the game population, once the continent's glory, and by the pitiable mental state of animals in zoos.

Rising Tide

They decided to try San Francisco, and arrived there in the Flower Power period. This the Gilberts (their daughter was then an infant) found to be much more their bag than South Africa, but when a good job opened up in Vancouver they decided to return to their homeland and give it another whirl. Gilbert has now been teaching there for six years, and evidently feels as much at home there as he would anywhere ,with his restless, questing tempera-

It wasn't long, however, before the rising tide of world pollution began to activate his trigger mechanism. "Last Nov. 11," he said, "on Armistice Day, that is, I began to think about what had to be done, and finally I said to myself, Til do it right here in the Fine Arts Building." He started by mocking up a gigantic atomic doomsday clock, to give the earthlings s little something to worry about. After that he and a number of like-minded students and faculty members went into battle to block B planned freeway that would have cut through one of Vancouver's most attractive neighborhoods. "We did it," Prof. Gilbert said, a crafty backwoodsman grin lighting up his thickly whiskered face. "They changed their plans. The freeway was buikt—but elsewhere." This goes to the core of the Gilbert philosophy of pragmatic activism in the anti-pollution cause; governments—local; state or federal—will act if they must, and will legislate if necessary, but the impetus should come from the populace, from an angry and aroused citizenry.

Gilbert himself is conscious of time running out. His back and one of his legs cause some discomfort, he says, when he has been on his feet too long. He has been on the lookout for a younger disciple to carry on his work. "There was one youngster in Berlin," be said reflectively, "I slmost had him at the point of taking over for me. Maybe somebody else will come along, in a year or so. . . . "

Christmas Present PEOPLE: Delivered 28 Years

Christmas came a couple of months early—or 28 years late—for Duane H. Baldwin of El Paso. Teras. Baldwin's mother mailed him an engraved silver wrist watch in 1944 while he was a corporal with the 1st Cavalry Division in the South Pacific. A series of events, including a bout with malaria and a bullet wound, separated Baldwin from his unit, and a friend, M.M. Gillstrap of Cleburne, Texas, carried the package around in his duffle bag until he went home to Texas at the end of the war. Baldwin, a White Sands, New Mexico, Missile Range employee, finally received his 28-year-old Christmas present at a recent 1st Cavalry Division reuvion at Fort Hood, Texas.

The battle over Yoss the (censored) parrot, a hostile witness who has refused to sing in court, ran into further difficulties Saturday after a third person claimed ownership of the bird. Yossi began plaguing Israeli justice last winter after pet lover Amos Meyer complained that his parrot had disappeared, but a bird like Yossi was living at the nearby home of a horse breeder, who insisted it belonged to him. Police said Saturday a third person had called them, claiming she saw Yossi on television and recognized it as hers. Mrs. Adriana Gecler, a 30-year-old Haifa housewife, said the bird was stolen from her four years ago and that she had com-plained to the police. Police verified her complaint. She told police she had some of Yossi's feathers and police have agreed to accept them as evidence for her claim. Yossi confounded the judge twice in the past nine months when he refused in court a German and claimed he knew. Last the judge finally went to home where the bird : more relaxed. Yossi only ed. Police said the co the bird and would wait sings and for the result feather test before dec the case.
